GERMAN DUAL VOCATIONAL TRAINING 2026

Study and Earn in Germany

What is an Ausbildung?

An Ausbildung combines theoretical learning with practical on-the-job training where you split your time between working in a company and attending a vocational school (Berufsschule).

Duration: 3 Years

What Sets Ausbildung Apart from University?

An Ausbildung focuses on practical skills needed for specific professions. While university education is more academic and taught at a university, an Ausbildung prepares you directly for a career by giving you hands-on experience directly from industries and companies.

☯ Benefits of Ausbildung

01 It's Completely Free

Companies provide the vocational training completely for free with a goal to absorb its apprentices into the company upon completion.

02 You Get Paid an Allowance

A monthly allowance of 800€ to 1500€ is provided by the company. The allowance is sufficient to support living expenses for the 3 years duration of the training in Germany. Average cost of living in Germany including rent, utilities, groceries and transportation is around 800€ a month.

03 Job Security upon Completion

Most apprentice are offered full-time jobs at their training companies after completing the training with good performance. However, you are free to work at other companies if you wish to.

04 Hands on Experience

Get direct exposure to your chosen field from day one. Usually a mentor is assigned to you from the company to give you a deeper understanding of your role.
